

The Aral Sea, August 21, 1964. Although by this time navigation and the commercial fishery had suffered from the shrinkage of the sea, these activities were still viable. Vozrozhdeniya Island, with its biowarfare facility, was still small and well isolated from the mainland. (Photograph from the Argon satellite.)

